THE LOVE LIGHTS OF HOME.

The bird to the nest and the bee to the comb,
 When the night from the heavens falls dreary,
 And Love to the light in the windows of home,
 The light of the love of my dearie,
 And Love in the light like a swallow in flight,
 When the storm blows the stars from the blue of the night,
 And a kiss from the red rose, a smile from the white,
 In the gardens that bloom for my dearie!

The ships in the harbor from over the foam,
 When the way has been stormy and weary,
 And Love to the light in the windows at home,
 The light of the love of my dearie,
 And Love to the light, like the bloom from the blight,
 When the spring sun weaves wonders of red and of white,
 And the darkness of winter is kissed to the bright,
 In the gardens that bloom for my dearie.

The bird to the nest and the bee to the comb,
 And never a night shall fall dreary
 While the lights in the beautiful windows at home,
 Are lit by the love of my dearie!
 And Love to the light, like a bird from the night,
 Where angels in lilacs Love's litanies write,
 And a kiss from the crimson, a smile from the white,
 In the gardens that bloom for my dearie!

Told Out of Court.

"Here," said the assistant editor of the magazine, "is a sonnet that I don't know what to do with. It's just a lot of lines strung together, without sense or reason."
 "Well, you ought," replied the editor, "to know what to do with that kind of trash, without bothering me about it."
 "But this thing was written by the daughter of a man who has a national reputation."

"Oh! we'll have it illustrated, and send out advance sheets of it for the use of exchange editors, with an explanation to the effect that the young lady has shown a decided poetic tendency ever since she was old enough to hold a pen. Write to her father at once, and tell him that he will be expected to take 5000 copies of the magazine, at regular rates."—Cleveland Leader.

Cheap and Durable Loops.

Loops for hanging up garments are always wearing out and breaking, particularly with children's cloaks and coats. To make a serviceable loop cut a strip of kid from an old glove, roll it in a piece of coarse string, and sew the edges of kid neatly together. This loop, fastened securely to a garment, will stand any amount of pulling without wearing or breaking.

TAMWORTH.

Our show this year was a great success, even better than last year. The weather was all that could be desired and every one seemed well pleased. Everything went off quietly. The concert in aid of the Public Library was a great success. The hall was filled to its seating capacity and all the available chairs had to be taken from O'xall's hall and library rooms to help seat the crowd. The programme was very fine and all were well pleased with it.

A special vestry meeting was called on Monday evening to take into consideration the roofing of Christ Church with metallic shingles. The contract was given Mr. Thomas Smith to be completed before the end of September. When the new roof is placed upon the church it will be a thorough fire proof building, as it is built of stone with slate and metallic shingles on the roofs making it a first class building in all respects and a credit to any parish.

In its issue of the 10th and 17th insts. there appeared in the Beaver a correspondence from Tamworth made up of slanderous reports, stating things without the least shadow of truth. In thus slandering and making little of every one such correspondence is a damage to any paper and should not be inserted. When a person comes so detestably low that they have to resort to lies and slander and think it is cunning or a joke it is time to root them out and all honest reliable papers should not insert such, as it is a damage to the paper that prints such stuff.

ANOTHER CRITICISM—THE CONSERVATIVE LEADERS JUDGED FROM A FARMER'S STAND POINT.

DEAR EXPRESS—As you have already printed one letter of mine, criticising the Conservative Leader's late speeches here in Napanee, from a farmer's standpoint, perhaps you will allow space for some further remarks on the same line.

Those who heard their speeches and even those who have read the reports published, must have noticed that every speaker, without exception, referred to the fact that the Sandfield Macdonald Government left in the public treasury a surplus of over four millions, in hard cash—that he kept the annual expenditure much within the annual receipts, and they led their hearers to infer that had not the Liberals come into power the same system of annual surpluses would have gone on until to-day.

SOME UNFAIR COMPARISONS.

Dr. Meacham took a good deal of pains to prepare and read a comparative statement of the yearly average total receipts and total expenditures of each parliament since Confederation. According to his showing there was an average surplus of nearly a million a year during the Macdonald regime and then the average expenditure jumped from about a million and a half each year to over three millions during the first parliament under Liberal rule and it had remained about there ever since. No doubt that will be one of the Doctor's favorite lines of attack during the next campaign in Lennox county.

His figures may be correct but the inferences he attempts to draw are anything but that. A PART of the truth is carefully presented but not the WHOLE truth. These figures, when properly explained and understood, give no such evidence of "reckless extravagance" and of "squandering the peoples' money" as some pretend for. Let all the facts of the case be clearly understood and the case is by no means such a bad one as all the Conservative orators tried so hard to make out.

What are the facts? Simply these: Sandfield Macdonald had no idea himself of continuing to hoard up any such annual surpluses, or of keeping the yearly public expenditure down to the point that it was during the first four years of our independent provincial existence. He was fortunate in having about the same annual per capita bounty from the Dominion Government we have had ever since. His other sources of provincial revenue average almost as large as they did during the next dozen years of our history. On the other hand, but for tenance, $130,050.

Deaf and Dumb Asylum, $44,791.

Blind Asylum, $33,972.

Agricultural College and Model Farm, $26,666.

We regret again, that had the Macdonald Government remained in power until this day the probabilities are that the expenses of all these institutions of his inception would have been just as great as they now are, and it would have been just as fair to have laid the same charge of "increased expenditure" as it now is.

What one of these public institutions would the Conservative leaders of to-day close up? Would it be the London Insane Asylum, with its hundreds of unfortunates? Would it be the Blind or the Deaf and Dumb Asylums, which are now such a source of blessing and comfort to so many hundreds of our unfortunate fellow creatures? Would it be the Agricultural College? Mr. Whitney and all his colleagues on Thursday stood for its continuance, but some curtailment of expenses. Would it be the Government House? These same Conservatives voted to have it continued, though some items have been reduced. Would it be the Central Prison? The hundreds now maintained there at Provincial Government expense would in that case be huddled in our county jails, at the expense of the municipalities, or sent to the penitentiary, where the expense per prisoner to the tax-payer has been far greater during all these years of Conservative rule at Ottawa.

FURTHER INSTITUTIONS NEEDED.

The growing needs of the Province during the past twenty years have made it necessary to establish a number of other large and extensive institutions, every one of which entails yearly increased expenditure. Among these have been additional Lunatic Asylums at Hamilton, Mimico, Rockwood and Brockville, every one of which is now well filled, and not one of which even Conservative economists would propose to close. A large Idiot Asylum has also been established at Orillia—a necessary and humane institution. The Andrew Mercer female prison and reformatory has also been built at Toronto, and none would now propose to close it. A Juvenile Reformatory has been established at Penetanguishene, and it is also a necessary institution. Besides it has been necessary to increase the capacity of every one of the old asylums, at enormously increased expenditure, and to add jails and lock-ups in a number of the newly erected counties and districts that had not an existence twenty years ago.

These and a hundred other items of necessary expense that must needs

HUMAN NATURE, YOU KNOW.

A New Danger From Typewriters Employed in Partnership.

"It's human nature," declared Brown to his stenographer. "He doesn't want me to know; but I will know. Mixer, my partner, won't tell me a word about it, but I'll find out, if I have to search his papers. Ideal! I, his partner, can't be told of the business of the firm."

Mixer had a client. Every afternoon for a week she had walked into Mixer's private office, and an earnest conversation always ensued behind partly-closed doors. It was evidently a divorce case. But Mixer, though Brown had repeatedly hinted that he should divulge, wouldn't drop a hint.

"Mighty swell client you have there," Brown ventured to remark one day. "Think so, do you?" asked Mixer with a smile, but not a hint of the inside of the case.

Brown determined to know what the case was. That same afternoon the fair client came in, and, with an entrancing smile, vanished into Mixer's private office, without even the formality of a knock. When she came out she was shutting up her purse. That gave Brown an idea.

"Mixer," said he a short time afterward, with a wink at the stenographer, "better divide up on that retainer, hadn't you?"

"What retainer?"

"Oh, the swell client—you know."

"Well, you see, I'm running this case alone."

"You are?" cried Brown, with some show of feeling, for the partnership papers demanded division of the spoils.

"Yes," was the reply, "that money was for a new dress."

"New dress?" gasped Brown. "This is scandalous, sir. I must insist that you tell me the name of this woman."

"Very well, Mr. Brown. She's my wife."

That night Mixer and his wife discussed "the case" over sparkling champagne. Brown had sent it up.

"It's human nature, you know," slyly remarked his stenographer the next morning when Mixer came in. But Brown only glared at her over his glasses.

A HEALTHFUL PURSUIT.

HOP PICKING IN PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY—A RACY ACCOUNT OF THE OPERATION.

DEAR EDITOR:—Your correspondent has been, for the past week or so, enjoying an outing in one of the many hop-yards of this county, and news being rather scarce, we thought a short account of this most picturesque feature of country out-door life might interest some of your readers even though they live in a hop-growing district. We give as our excuse the innocent question of a certain young lady from Lennox, who seeing a hop-yard for the first time, inquired, "what sort of berries are growing on those poles?"

To begin then, 7 o'clock in the morning finds us wending our way to the yard, greatly enjoying the cool, fresh air, the pungent aroma of the hops, the glimpses we catch, between the rows of poles with their graceful vines, of bright colored calico gowns and sun-bonnets of the women and girls who have already commenced work, the hum of voices, and the sparkling dew, we take our place at the box that has been assigned us, and call "pole," where-upon the box-tender comes and cuts a vine near the root, pulls the supporting pole, and places it on the box, ready to be stripped of its scented cones. Each box is divided into four sections, each one holding six bushels, and are thirty inches deep. The pickers are paid, this year 30 cents per box, or one cent per inch.

Soon all the pickers are in the yard and the box-tender is kept pretty busy pulling poles, stripping the ones that have been picked and piling them in heaps ready for the next year. The vines are also piled into heaps to be burned. The hops must be picked free from stems and leaves, and it is necessary to work with a will as they settle very fast, but when two of a family pick at opposite sections they "dump over" when each have half a box and thus make much more than where one is picking alone. When the box is full the call "empty" runs through the yard and the yard-boss comes and takes a look at it to see that it is all right. Then the hops are emptied into a great sack ready to be taken to the kiln to dry. The forenoon soon passes, with laughter, jest and song, and then comes the noon-day meal. We gladly troop off to the hop house where a table is spread for us, liberally supplied with hot tea, potatoes and corn. We remove our thick gloves, get our dinner-baskets and take our place, and oh! the appetites we take with us. All the doctors' tonics in the world fall short of hop-picking. You feel yourself growing stronger every day, the blood courses more buoyantly through your veins and a new vigor comes to mind and body. The dinner hour is a merry one, and all declare it better than a picnic. Next comes a race up stairs to see the kiln, a peep into the furnace rooms and then away again to the yard. As the afternoon draws to a close we get restless and visit the other boxes for a chat, then back and to work again. One of the leading questions in the yard is "what are you going to do with your 'hop-money'?" and woe unto you if you do not tell. Night comes at last and after another pleasant chat with the pickers we start for home tired but happy.

during the next dozen years of our history. On the other hand but few of our provincial public institutions, which now cost us so much for their necessary annual maintenance had then commenced their existence. No wonder the surplus grew during that time.

WHAT HE THEN PROVIDED FOR.

Here are some of the items of increased public expenditure that Premier Macdonald himself provided for, before the defeat of his Government.

1. He enacted a law during the last session of the first parliament providing for the distribution of at least nearly one half of the total surplus in the shape of railway bonuses, and he thus bound himself to at once begin to "squander" that fine surplus and also to largely increase the after average expenditure of each year.

2. He also began the erection of a number of our largest and most expensive public institutions which have ever since been a source of largely increased expenditure, and they would have caused the same expense had his government remained in power. Among these expensive buildings began in his day, but the completion and maintenance of which has since so much increased expense, many be enumerated the following:

1. The Lieut-Governor's official residence at Toronto, costing in the long run, hundreds of thousands.

2. The Central Prison, at Toronto, also costing in the long run, hundreds of thousands.

3. The Insane Asylum at London, another very expensive and large institution.

4. The Deaf and Dumb Asylum, at Belleville, large and costly.

5. The Blind Asylum, at Brantford, costing in the long run over a hundred thousand.

6. The Model Farm and Agricultural College, at Mimico. He purchased and paid for a considerable tract of land there, near the city of Toronto, that turned out wholly unsuited for any such purpose and which had to be disposed of afterwards at a very considerable sacrifice and a more suitable farm purchased at Guelph.

Now, scarcely one of these extensive and expensive projects had been completed at the time of the Macdonald government downfall, though all were under way and they were handed over as an expensive legacy to their successors. They have had to be efficiently maintained ever since, at enormous public cost. And now the Member for Lennox strikes the key note of demanding the defeat of the Liberals because they have increased the annual expenditures, and that largely because of the existence of these very institutions! The other Conservative orators all pitch their songs to the same key.

Is it just fair to state such a partial and one sided case to the electors and to withhold at the same time such important explanations, with which many farmers of to-day are not familiar? Stronger words might be used.

WHAT THESE NOW COST.

Laying aside the enormous first cost of the erection and establishment of these institutions, every one of them inaugurated by the economical Sandfield Macdonald, let us turn to the Ontario estimates for this year and see what is now the necessary annual expenses in connection with their maintenance.

Expenses, contingencies, repairs etc. of the Government House, over and above salaries and the like $3,879.

The Patrons attempted to have these sums struck off, but every Conservative M. P. P., who spoke here last Thursday voted against them.

Central Prison expenses and maintenance $60,025.

No objection is now made to this sum. Not one dollar of it was required in Macdonald's time.

London Insane Asylum, main-necessary expense that must needs have been established to meet the growing wants of the country, no matter what party was in power, have all tended to swell up the increased expense items now complained of. But is it fair and honest for any opposition to thus parade the bare figures about the country and withhold from the people an honest explanation in regard to them? Does it not look like an attempt to presume too much on a lack of intelligence among the audiences now being appealed to.

STILL GREATER UNFAIRNESS.

Besides all this, is it not a well known fact, to the older electors especially, that the Liberal Government, after it came into power, distributed a million and a half of that surplus directly to the tax-payers of the country, through the various municipal councils? There was not a municipality in existence throughout all Ontario that did not get a fair and just share of that distribution. The Township of Richmond received $6,000 out of that distribution, and the tax-payers have been receiving the interest on the investment ever since. Ernestown, the township in which the Doctor resides, received as its share $9,000 from that distribution which it has had invested ever since, and the tax-payers have a yearly income therefrom. I think it was over $40,000 that came to the municipalities of Lennox alone. Some went to pay off old debts, as in Napanee, I think. Some went to build better roads and safer bridges, as in Fredericksburgh. Some was invested in aiding the school funds. Every council made its own disposal, and the Government's intention that every tax-payer should get his fair and equal share was carried out, as far as it was possible for the government to do so.

Now, can it be credited that Dr. Meacham and his Conservative colleagues actually added in this generous distribution as a part of the "increased average annual expenses" of the Liberal party? Yet such is actually the case, and now they call on the tax-payers of Lennox, who have been thus benefitted to rise up and condemn such extravagance!

They prepare figures to show that yearly expenses, thus increased by distributing a surplus and by thus completing public institutions ought not to have been increased! What can intelligent people think of tactics of that kind?

MANACLED

By Acute Indigestion. Wealth Would Not Buy Freedom—South American Nervine Broke the Shackles.

Reuben E. Trux, M.F.P., millowner and manufacturer, of Walkerton, Ont., writes of the great South American Nervine: "I had been for over ten years very much troubled with acute indigestion, tried many remedies and treatments and got little or no benefit. Your remedy was recommended to me. I obtained great relief from a few doses, and when I had taken only two bottles I felt entirely free from my ailment. I strongly recommend it and believe it will cure any who may be suffering as I did." Sold by A. W. Grange & Bro.

SLOAN'S INDIAN TONIC

Cures Salt Rheum and Scald Head.

Mrs. Thomas Holder, of Aylmer, says: "I have been a great sufferer for a good many years with Salt Rheum, so bad at times it was impossible for me to wash a dish or do any housework, but after taking one bottle of Sloan's Indian Tonic, it took every particle of the disease out of my system, and made a perfect cure. It has now been four years since I took the medicine and the disease has not returned yet."

THE LENNOX FAIR.

The Lennox Fair, which was held here on Monday and Tuesday was a record breaker in point of attendance, but the exhibits were not up to the average of former years. The first day opened cold and unpromising and the directors decided to call off the speeding in the ring and reserve it for the second day. The Baby Show in the evening drew out a large crowd and proved a decided success. The Citizens' Band was in attendance and enlivened the proceedings with some choice selections of music. A number of very pretty babies, all worthy of a prize, were displayed by their proud parents. The prize for the handsomest baby boy was carried off by Ibra B. Alcombrack. Hulet's prize of a $15 portrait, framed, was awarded to Jessie Sohermehorn. The second prize was won by Gertie Warner, and the third by Onetina Huffman. Mrs. Finkle, of Nanpsee, and Mrs. Campbell, of Kingston, acted as Judges.

The weather on the second day proved propitious and the crowd in attendance was largely in excess of former years. The exhibits in the palace while not as large as last year was fully up to the standard in quality. The root exhibit was very light. The display of ladies work was fully up to the average and proved an attractive feature of the show. Among the special exhibits M. S. Madole's fine exhibit of hardware and stoves is worthy of special mention. Mr. C. Maybee, of The Peoples' Fair also made a fine display. Mr. C. A. Graham's exhibit of robes, harness etc. was very fine.

J. W. Courtney, of Newburgh, and Jas. Elliott, of Tamworth each made a fine display of tanned goods, robes, etc.

J. S. Hulet's exhibit of photographic work of all kinds was greatly admired. His display has come to be looked upon as a feature of the show.

Mr. Chas. Boyes also made a fine display of photographic work.

Mr. Wm. Smipkins was on hand with an exhibit of sewing and knitting machines, and Mr. J. N. McCreary displayed the merits of the new Raymond.

F. W. Hart's exhibit of pianos and organs was fine.

The following firms exhibited Agricultural implements, Potter & Blanchard, Nanpsee, A. A. Connolly, Yarker, E. Stickney, Newburgh, C. A. Graham, Nanpsee. Webster & Boyes made a fine exhibit of carriages as did C. A. Graham.

Chas. Ward, of Colebrook, had a fine pump on exhibition.

The Exhibition of horses, and cattle was really excellent and the judges had their work mapped out in arriving at a decision. The sheep and pig exhibit was good also. The following is the prize list.

MENDING BROKEN TREES.

Peculiar Results of Half-Girdling With Wire Bands.

In going through an old orchard where the great gales of the fall of 1894 blew over many trees, cutting and splitting off half the tops of others, I was struck, says J. H. Hale, in The Connecticut Courant, with the amount of abuse a peach tree will stand and yet recover. In clearing up the wreckage some of the split trees were bolted together, others had wire bands put on, and still others had the broken half cut away entirely, the split trunks smoothed up with a drawing knife and the one-sided head shortened in to balance it a little better. Trees treated in the latter method, while having a scarred trunk, with bark only on one side, have full rounded out heads, as good as though no harm had been ed many limbs and left pretty poor trees. The bolted trees look fairly well, but none are so good as those that were thoroughly pruned, with no attempt to save broken limbs. This experience covered about 1000 trees, and in any future breaking or splitting down I shall cut everything away, confident that how-ever lopsided a tree may be two years' new growth will put it in better shape than by any other method. A peculiar re-sult of half girdling some trees with wire bands was that the fruit borne on them has been larger and of brighter color, ripening from ten days to two weeks earlier than the same varieties of trees without wire bands. This might be an advantage in some seasons with cer-tain varieties, and if only a portion of a tree were girdled at on time, no seri-ous harm would come of it.

Tree Attracting Lightning.

An isolated tree offers a most danger-ous attraction to lightning. In woods the peril is diminished, because the elec-tricity is scattered. Trees with roots deep in humid soil are more apt to be struck than those in drier spots. Trees in damp places are always conductors of electricity. Lightning prefers oaks and rarely touches beeches. Resistance to electrical discharges varies according to the proportion of oily matter contained in the wood. The poplar possesses but little greasy substance and is a good con-ductor. It is dangerous to those who trust it for shelter, but if planted not nearer than ten metres from a dwelling proves to be a good lightning rod. If certain poplars are easily struck by elec-trical fluid, it is because their roots are in damp soil. All isolated trees should be avoided during a thunderstorm.

Decrease in Birth Rate.

It is a cause of great anxiety in France that the birth rate is less than the death rate, but the state of affairs in some portions of the United States is even more serious. While in France the birth rate is 22 per 1000, in Nebraska it is but 16.30 per 1000; in Maine 17.93 per 1000; New Hampshire, 18.4 per 1000; Vermont, 18.5; California, 19.4; Con-necticut, 21.3; Massachusetts, 21.5; Rhode Island has 22.5 per 1000, a little more than France; Wyoming has 21.8 per 1000 and Oregon 22.5. If it were not for immigration the population would be gradually falling off, and according to statistics the inhabitants of New Eng-land and the Pacific Coast will be re-placed by another race within a period varying from 16 to 200 years.

The Mississippi River.

According to calculations of John Birkenbine of Philadelphia, the drainage area of the Mississippi River is one and one-fourth millions of square miles, in-cluding nearly all of the country from the Alleghenies to the Rockies and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. In his communication to the Engineers' Club, Mr. Birkenbine estimates that one inch of rain falling evenly over this area would equal 21,780,000,000,000 gallons of water. The average yearly fall in the Mississippi watershed averages from 20 to 43 inches according to locality. The river has an average flow of 664,000 cubic feet per second.

Sugar Good for Athletes.

Alpine climbers, who seldom eat candy at home, are said to appreciate it highly when on their excursions. Guides are fond of it, as a great source of mus-cular force. Experiments have recently been made in Germany to demonstrate the value of sugar to those who perform hard labor. The Prussian Ministry of War is satisfied that muscular work done when natural sugar (cane or beet sugar) was used, was superior to that when saccharin formed a part of the diet. The blood is poor in sugar after muscular exertion, but a small quantity eaten gives back the lost energy.

CLASS XXIX—ONE HONEST MAN.

Dear Editor: Please inform your readers, that if written to confidentially, I will mail, in a sealed letter, particulars of a genuine, honest, home cure, by which I was permanently restored to health and manly vigor, after years of suffering from nervous debility, sexual weakness, night losses and weak digestion. I was robbed and swindled by the quacks and nearly lost faith in mankind, but thank heaven I am now well, vigorous and strong, and wish to make this certain means of cure known to all suf-ferers. I have nothing to sell and want no money, but being a firm believer in the universal brotherhood of man, I am desirous of helping the unfortunate to regain their health and happiness. I promise you per-fect secrecy. Address with stamp, Wm. T. McLaughlin, Agents' Supplies, P.O. Box 99, St. Henri, Que.

THE KICKING COW.

How a Determined Man Can Subdue Her Without Violence.

It would be difficult, I believe, to find a dairymen of any extent who does not occasionally have in his herd a cow that gives much annoyance from the habit of kicking while being milked. There are a great many prescribed means of subduing such animals, and most milkers have found some plan that works fairly well. Usually really vicious cows have to submit to fixtures of ropes, straps or the like, but even these can be done without if the milker is a strong, resolute fellow who has not the least fear of his cow, and will not lose control of his temper. One plan I know to work well, says a writer in Farmer's Advocate, is to tie the cow's head close and secure, so that she cannot jump forwards or backwards. Then set the pail a little way out from her, bend over and place the head very firmly against her groin, and with the left hand grasp the back near teat very firmly and commence milking with the other hand. In all probability she will set up a furious and determined opposition, but if the milker is persistent and stays at his work without a flinch she will soon lose confidence in her ability to kick herself free, and will give up considerably exhausted and subdued. Two or three determined efforts will subdue very bad cases, rendering them ready to stand peacefully for weeks together. Occasionally she returns to her old vice after a time, when another trial of strength and power of endurance will have to be gone through with and will usually suffice. In breaking a heifer or a kicking cow rough usage is unnecessary and unwise. By the plan outlined a really bad case can be milked and subdued in spite of herself by a strong, determined man.

A Well Known Hotel-keeper
Relates his Experience.

He Suffered Greatly from Kidney Trouble and Indigestion—He Doctored for a Long Time Without Getting Any Relief.

From the Standard, Cornwall.

The march of the world's progress is forced, protracted and continuous, the competition for supremacy is keen. The man of business must keep rank if he would secure any covetable measure of success. The watchfulness, vigilance and thought involved in modern superintendency produces a severe strain on the physical and mental powers of modern business men, and exposes them to the attacks of certain diseases. Considering that much depends on health in this struggle, it behooves those who would be victorious, to guard against the first approach of disease. Neglect of early adjustment of digestive and kidney disorders is often fraught with dire results, added to this is the unpardonable trifling with health by experimenting with all manner of worthless decoctions. It is simply invaluable to make the acquaintance of a safe and effective remedy such as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. James Macpherson, hotel keeper in the village of Lancaster, Glengarry county, has done business for a number of years in Lancaster, and having successfully catered for the patronage of the travelling public therefore is favorably known not only at home but also abroad. In conversation with a newspaper reporter he enumerated some of his ailments and how he was cured. About two years ago he said, "my whole digestive apparatus seemed to become disordered. Some days I could move around, then again I would be obliged to go to bed. I tried several things but with indifferent success. Occasionally I felt relieved, but in a day or two the old symptoms would return with a more depressing effect. This kind of thing went on until I became troubled with my kidneys, which was a very annoying addition to my sufferings. I was restless, with a sensation of sickness at the stomach, with intermittent pain in the small of my back. I was miserable enough when I consulted the doctor who probably did me and dependency the magic virtues of Paine's Celery Compound bring joy and new life! These are the leading facts in the following statement made by Mrs. G. Stone, of Eganville, Ont.

"For more than twelve years I was afflicted with kidney, stomach and female troubles, and had been attended by five doctors, and tried medicine after medicine, without any good results.

"My sufferings a year ago from the kidneys and stomach were dreadful. I was in such a state that I thought I could not live, and concluded there was no use trying other medicines.

"I was advised, however, to try Paine's Celery Compound, and finally decided to give it a trial. Before I had finished the first bottle I had improved very much, and after the use of a few more bottles I had not been so well for long years, and am now altogether a different person. The use of Paine's Celery Compound also banished my nervousness. I can therefore recommend Paine's Celery Compound to any one suffering from kidney, stomach and female troubles."

One of Caribou's bright 4-year-old girls, in answer to a question, surprised and amused her hearers. The conversation among the older people was in relation to heaven, and some one asked the little miss if she did not want to go to heaven when she died? The young girl turned, looked at her father, and said:

"No! I don't want to go to heaven. I want to go where papa goes."—Kennebec Journal.

Murderer just captured in a dive, to his companion)—Good-by, pard; we shall meet again in the wax-figure museum.—Fliegende Blätter.

Force of Habit.

"Did you speak to the father of the girl you wish to marry?" said one young man.

"Yes," replied the other.

"Did he give you any encouragement?"

"He seemed to think he did. He is a politician, and has been haunted by constituents ever since election. When I told him the ambition of my life, he said very gravely that it was seldom anybody secured exactly what he desired; he could see his way clear to making me the groom at his daughter's wedding, but he'd see what he could do about getting me the place of best man."—Washington Star.

Pain in the Back. DEAR SIRS,—I was troubled with pain in the back for months, and after trying several remedies without effect, thought I would use Haysard's Yellow Oil. I am glad to say that after using two bottles I was completely cured, and cannot recommend this excellent remedy too highly.

part of the farm to repair a broken gate, sled or some other farm tool that can not be easily taken to the shop, you can easily do so with this box. It is an improvement over the ordinary carpenter's tool box inasmuch as it has a better handle, for by this arrangement of handle you can balance it so nicely in your hand. Make an ordinary box 31 inches long, 10 inches wide and 5 inches deep; make handle 32 inches long and 1 1/2 inches wide and fasten with machine bolts as per cut. Round off the corners between A-A. B is a block on bottom and against one side partly sawed down from the top for holding saws. You can carry two or more saws, a set of planes, square, hammer, level, try square, nails, bolts, etc., etc., without dulling the tools at all. If necessary to carry the box through the rain throw some rain apron over the box and grip down over the handle.

How to Feed Poultry Rations.

Of almost as much importance as the foods is a knowledge of the proper way to feed them. To over-feed is actually worse than the opposite treatment. But with proper knowledge and thorough appreciation of that which is being aimed at, the two extremes will be avoided. It is in the medium course that success lies. The beginner is tempted to give more food to his hens which are beginning to lay well, under the impression that he will get better results in so doing. The experienced poultryman will tell you that to avoid over-feeding is one of the hardest rules to observe. It is the cause of much of the ill that poultry suffer. More is fatal when practised for any length of time. To further stimulate hens that are doing their best is to thrash the horse going at his top speed to make him go quicker. The twin factor in judicious feeding is exercise. The three great factors in the winter production of eggs are cut bone or meat, green stuff and exercise. Cut bone should be fed in quantity of one pound to every 16 hens, or one ounce to each hen. Feed three times per week or once daily if hens are laying well.

Green stuff.—Cabbages can be hung from the ceiling to within 2-3 feet of the floor. Feed mangels, carrots, turnips, etc., raw or boil the latter and mix with ground grains. Into a stiff mash. Clover hay should be cut into quarter inch lengths and steamed up placing in a pail and pouring boiling water over it the night before it is wanted for use. Cover the pail after pouring in the boiling water. So steamed it may be fed alone or mixed in with mash. Lawn clippings may be similarly treated. Exercise.—Use all ingenuity to keep the layers in exercise from morning till they go to roost. Throw all grain fed into litter, composed of chaff, straw, cut hay, cut hulls, dry leaves, etc., which should be on the floor to the depth of 4, 5, or 6 inches.—From report of A. G. Gilbert, Dominion Experimental Farms.

Broken Crockery, Feed For Chickens.

An excellent way to dispose of broken crockery that at times accumulates about the dooryard is to pound the pieces until they are as fine as grains of corn, and put them into a box or scatter them over the ground where the poultry can have access to them. There should always be a box or bin in the yard—preferably under cover—where the fowls can get to it at all times, into which shells, coal, broken plaster, crushed and burned bone, crushed crockery, etc., should be put. The box should never be empty.

A subscriber asks about feeding broken glass to poultry. We have never made a practice of using it, but know of a number of farmers who do and like it. They also claim that no evil effects result from its use. It seems to be an unnatural and unnecessary article to use, especially when gravel, bones, crushed stone, crockery, etc., are so easily obtained and prepared for use.

Most of us know from experience how sharp are the edges of broken glass; how fowls can swallow splinters of it with out lacerating their throats and mouths is indeed puzzling. Once in the gizzard, however, it provides awful sharp teeth.—Rural Californian.

Shortness of Breath. "Since last year I have had serious heart trouble caused by malaria. Shortness of breath, smothering spells on retiring, violent palpitation, etc., often made me gasp for breath. On procuring a liburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I found to my surprise and delight that they gave almost instant relief. I got healthy, restful sleep, my heart troubles disappeared, and I now feel very well and strong indeed."—Mr. H. H. J. A. Coor, Ingersoll Ont., makes this statement for a unable crowd.

some doctor, because I felt relieved. The doctor's medicine was taken and his directions obeyed, but I did not improve. I had heard of the fame of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My wife believed in them and urged me to try them. I am glad I did so, for after taking one box I felt better, and I continued taking the pills until I was completely cured. This summer I had an attack of the same complaints and I found Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as effective as before. I had this advantage, my knowledge and belief in the pills saved me from costly and tedious experimenting such as I had undergone previously. I may further add that both myself and Mrs. Macpherson have derived much benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I can cordially recommend them to those who are suffering similarly."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapper bearing the full trade mark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

"I want," said the recently married man in the novelty store, "a lady's belt."

"Yes, sir," said the polite shop empress. "What size?"

A bluish mantled the customer's brow, and he swallowed twice in rapid succession. Then he said:

"I don't know exactly. Let me have a yard stick, please."

And as he placed it along the inside of his arm, from shoulder to wrist, the shop empress remarked beneath her breath to her chum, "He ain't the fool he looks, is he, Jenny?"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

With Hood's Sarsaparilla, "Sales Talk," and show that this medicine has enjoyed public confidence and patronage to a greater extent than accorded any other proprietary medicine. This is simply because it possesses greater merit and produces greater cures than any other. It is not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that tells the story. All advertisements of Hood's Sarsaparilla, like Hood's Sarsaparilla itself, are honest. We have never deceived the public, and this with its superlative medicinal merit, is why the people have abiding confidence in it, and buy

The Limits of Patience.

"Mary, I have stood it long enough." A determined expression lent to his countenance a Napoleonic air at 6 per cent, as he proceeded. "I can stand most things. I did not kick when you took the wheel. I even consented to cook my own supper when you were out with your club wheeling." The determined expression loaned his countenance some more Napoleonic air on the same terms. "I did not object when you strapped a couple of baby carriages on the front of your wheel and took the family with you; I was meek as a lamb when you cut down my twelve-dollar pants to make a pair of bloomers; it didn't bother me to any great extent when you called on me to pay a pair of fines for riding without a light, but—"

He borrowed some more Napoleonic air.

"—I object like thundering blazes when you wear my only pair of suspenders! Take 'em off, Mary! Take 'em off!"

There Are Others.

She—Chimmie, won't you take me to see de Chimmie ter-day?

Chimmie—I will, of yer promise not ter ask any questions. It's werry ag-grawatin' ter a dead-game sport ter have wimmen folks fer everlastin' talkin' in yer ear when de game's excitin'. Come along.

That Would Be Different.

"Yes," said the patient listener suddenly, as he interrupted the eloquent Aristocrat, who for over an hour had been pouring into his ear a mixture of bile and misinformation regarding the relationship of labor and capital. "I admit all you have argued, I have read Lloyd's book on 'Wealth Against Commonwealth,' and own that he has made a powerful case against John D. Rockefeller. He has shown him to be a man who is both high-handed and under-handed, a man who will do anything to acquire money, and yet I cannot so much blame Rockefeller. He is the result of existing conditions. Now, tell me honestly, what would you do yourself if you were in Rockefeller's place?"

The eyes of the ardent reformer bulged out like the unnecessary knobs on a wooden brass bedstead.

"If," he almost shrieked, "I found myself in his place, I'd cling to that place like a sick kitten to a hot brick."

—New York Journal.

He grumbled away on a patch of ground, "Waiting for something to happen." Year after year the same old round, "Waiting for something to happen." The moments he had to spare he spent in "waiting for something to happen." His hair grew gray, his shoulders bent, but he grumbled and he loafed, and was content "to wait for something to happen."

His tools wore out, and his ground grew poor. "Waiting for something to happen." But he grumbled and loafed and he still was sure That "something would some day happen." And many a chance he let go past, "Waiting for something to happen." Until there came a day, at last, he cast—When clouds above his head were cast—Something had finally happened!

PERMITTED HIM TO SMOKE.

But Didn't Allow Her Husband to Do It —Read and Learn Why.

It happened during the recent cool spell, and the man in the case will always think of her as the nicest little woman. She was young and her cheeks were so delightfully pink that more than one person looked at her with admiration as she boarded the car, followed by one of those nondescript females which very pretty women usually select as friends. The car was almost full, and they took the seat facing those devoted to smokers.

Only one man was smoking, and he politely took his cigar out of his mouth and said to the pretty passenger, "Pardon me, madam, do you object to smoke?"

"Not at all, sir," was the smiling reply, "pray go on; I like it."

When they got off fifteen minutes later the nondescript female, still with a dazed look on her face, said: "Why, Carrie, how could you tell that man you liked smoke when only yesterday I heard you threaten Joe with a divorce if he—"

"That has nothing to do with the case, dear," said the pretty woman calmly; "when I took out this jacket this morning I noticed a mole hole in the sleeve. Now, nothing kills moths sooner than tobacco, so I—"

"But why not let Joe smoke the moths out of it?"

"And furnish him with an argument in favor of tobacco in the house? No, thank you, dear. Now, this man is a stranger, who will never see me again, so it makes no difference."

And the polite passenger never knew.

Discouraging.

Suspicious-Looking Party—Yus.

Nervous Philanthropist—Er—rather a rough sort of thoroughfare, isn't it?

Suspicious-Looking Party—Yus, it is a bit thick. The further yer gows down the thicker it gets. I lives in the last house.

Only a Joke.

"Sir," said the fiery little fellow, with some show of temper, "you have my umbrella."

"Your umbrella?" exclaimed the big man, who had just picked up the umbrella that the little fellow had deposited in the corner.

"Yes, sir; my umbrella," repeated the little fellow, "and you were just about to walk away with it."

"Yes, yes, of course; merely a joke, you know," explained the big man putting it back.

"Joke! Joke!" roared the little man. "Do you consider it a joke to pick up a nice new umbrella and walk away with it?"

FOR SUNDAY READING.

A Newspaper Sermon Upon Felix's "A Convenient Season."

Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season I will call for thee.—Acts, xxiv., 25.

Felix was very wily, very timid and very selfish, as most of us are.

Under the circumstances in which the world has entangled itself it is rather difficult to be anything else. What with the teasings and cajolings of personal ambition it requires a certain amount of heroism for a man to do what he knows he ought to do.

There is no doubt that goodness is the best spiritual investment a man can make; that uprightness, integrity, generosity, charity are qualities of character whose value is beyond all appraisal. And yet ambition is an orator with such persuasive speech that it can make the worse appear the better and half convince us that an act at which our conscience revolts will produce the happiness we long for. We allow ourselves to be deceived by specious arguments, and unwholesome lives mingled with unspoken regrets are the consequence.

We all intend to rectify things by and by, but life slips away, the years like a swift flowing current sweep us into old age, and what we hoped to do remains forever unaccomplished, so far as this life is concerned. Beginning with false premises, we inevitably and logically reach an unsatisfactory conclusion. With the power to make ourselves noble, we waste our energy and die in the sad consciousness that we have not done the half of what we intended to do, and have not done that half as well as we were capable of doing it.

It was so with Governor Felix, and it is so with the majority of us. He saw that Paul's doctrine was the only safe doctrine, and he determined to adopt the principles propounded by him, but it would be more convenient to do so at some future time, and very inconvenient to do so just then. The chance to change himself from a bad ruler into a good man was lost, and it never again presented itself.

There is a similar story told of the wild and dissipated youth who afterward became St. Augustine. He seems to have had two natures, as most of us have. On a certain occasion, when his nobler nature was in the ascendant, he fell on his knees, crying, "O, Lord, make me holy!" but immediately his ignoble nature wrestled for the mastery, and he added, "But not yet!" We all have the same experience.

THE PASSING OF ISIS.

And thus the Light of Egypt was preserved. In other lands, still guarded by the "wise," that light had been in a dark darkness lost. For now indeed the time was high at hand when Isis from her cherished home must stray.

Abandoning her temples on the Nile. Those gorgeous temples where the radiant light

Of morning in a flood of glory bewildering, through pillared halls and all the brightly tinted courts, where still was heard

Day after day to greet the rising sun, The matin hymns of white-robed hierophants;

And in the hallowing light of evening still The choral music of the vespers thrilled And vague presentiment of coming woe.

And a solemn silence brooded o'er the scene! And now full soon the fateful time drew nigh

When Isis from her temple must depart, Ejected from her home upon the Nile; And premonitions of the change appeared— Strange portents, voices, spectral visitants, Oppressing men with bodings of unrest

And vague presentiment of coming woe. "Twas said her statues had been seen to weep,

And many from their places were removed, And sobbs and wailings issued from the crypts

And mingled even with the vesper hymns; And also later in the night was heard

— R. G. CARTER. G. A. BROWNE. H. B. SHEERWOOD.

Two skinnish with each other and nothing decisive is attained—neither obtains the mastery. In other instances there is a pitched battle between the two, and though the fortunes of war waver for a while, the saintly wins the day and the evil surrenders unconditionally.

No man knows himself until that battle has been fought. So long as it remains in doubt whether you are to be governed by principle or by expediency, by justice and truth or by personal ambition, so long you are building without a solid foundation, and your future will depend largely on the temptations which may happen to come your way. If you have clear weather you will get on without any serious mishap, and appear to be a better man and a stronger man than you really are; but if some evil minded chance knocks at your door with its promise of aggrandizement you will be in danger of being so dazzled that conscience will retire in dismay and despair.

This "more convenient season" is a mere figment of the imagination, the device of the spirit of evil, a false prophet, a dose of opium thrust down the throat of your better self. There never was and there never will be a more convenient season than now. The man who waits until to-morrow always waits until he is too late. Difficulties accumulate with the passage of time.

If you are about to start on a journey, and standing in the doorway, watching the first snowflakes of a coming storm, you say, "I will go in the afternoon," or, "I will go in the morning," the chances are that you will wait until it is too late to go at all. Every minute makes your task harder to accomplish. Start at once and you will triumph over the elements. The falling flakes will not impede your progress, and you may reach your destination before the storm bursts in its first fury. But if you wait you make a mistake which may possibly prove fatal. The snow heaps itself in drifts, and by the time you have fully made up your mind to start the roads have become impassable.

In spiritual concerns the same rule holds good, as many a poor, forlorn soul can testify, and as all of us, for that matter, can testify to a certain extent. The habit which you ought to break is now like a spider's web. One sweep of the will and it is gone; delay and the web hardens into threads of steel, and only a giant's strength can break it.

If you say, "I will mend myself by and by," you will find that your "by and by" will never arrive. It is a delusion, a rainbow, a dream, a nothing. What is worth doing at all is worth doing now. One effort, one mighty effort, calling on all the hosts of heaven for help, and you will make a man of yourself.—New York Herald.

Caine's "Christian."

Mr. Caine's Christian is a man of Christlike mould. He is Robert Storm, the son of a peer, who, turning his back upon station and wealth, goes out into the wilderness of London, smiting the wealthy and the powerful with scathing words, and seeking to reclaim the fallen men and the fallen women who were his kindred lot. Over and over again his likeness to Christ is insisted upon.

Do not let me be misunderstood. Mr. Caine's Christian is no Christ. He is no reincarnated Godhead. He is a very human follower of the Master, eagerly willing in spirit, but weak in the flesh. On the struggles of that spirit and that flesh depends the most vivid interest of the book.

Some Tested Points in Diet.

The fact that milk has become extremely popular with all classes of physicians of late years is emphasized by a recent writer in The North American Review. Formerly a fever patient was forbidden to take the article, while in modern practice it is about the only food allowed, and a well-nigh exclusive diet of that liquid is said to be very efficacious in diabetes. At the German spas, Carlsbad, Wiesbaden, etc., a very little bread is allowed, the diet being mostly made up of milk, eggs, meat, and lean beef; a non-starch diet is the rule, bread, starchy vegetables and cereals being almost excluded. Rice is easily digested and an excellent food, except that it abounds in earth salts. Fruits are not only digested in the first stomach, but they have a large part of the nourishment already in a condition to be absorbed and assimilated as soon as eaten. The food elements in bread and cereals have to undergo a process of digestion in the stomach and then be passed on to the intestines for a still further chemical change before being of use to the human system, showing the advantage of a diet of lean meats and fruits.

Slang in the House of Commons.
An honorable member said in the House lately that they had the Government "on toast" for once. He added that if he might use a vulgar expression, he should say that the wild Irish had been "got at." "On toast," therefore, would seem to require no apology. Once on a time Mr. Bernal Osborne's use of the expression "being sat upon" caused some comment in another place. But we have progressed, since then.—

WHY SHE WAS OUT SHOPPING.
She Had Hidden in the Closet and Heard What He Said.

They met at the remnant counter in one of the big dry goods shops. One of them was evidently married and the other looked like a teacher.
"You look sort of haggard to-day, dear," said the teacher. "Didn't you sleep well last night?"
"Um-no," was the reply. "I—well, you see, James went to his club right after dinner, and I knew he meant to stay pretty late, because he told me so carefully that he expected to meet a Minneapolis man, with whom he hoped to do a nice little stroke of business. He also unnecessarily mentioned the fact that I should have the prettiest new frock in Chicago if he succeeded."
"Oh!"
"Mhm. Well, as it happened, I was going out myself; it was the evening for my card club, and I didn't really mind his going too, though, of course, I told him not to stay late."
"Yes. Well?"
"I reached home at 12.30 and found, to my horror, that he hadn't come yet. The truth is that I had let both of the maids go to a ball, and—"
"But I thought your husband told you never to do that."
"He did. But a man's place is at home with his wife, anyhow; besides, I knew that even if he found out that I had done it he would only scold a little, while if I refused to let Alma go she would probably leave and coax Christine

THE LATEST FASHIONS.

Bustles Will Be Features in Autumn Modes—Hints on Freshening Up.

Smaller sleeves are undoubtedly coming into fashion. The latest creations in Paris show scarcely any fullness. At present the most popular sleeve has a small puff at the top, and it is plain from the puff at the wrist. The puffing may be provided by the sleeve itself or by an additional piece of material. A modern model is made perfectly plain, except for a few plaits set in the shoulder seam. Sleeves continue to be cut long, but the point over the hand is not frequently seen. Lace frills over the hand, however, are much in vogue, and they are seen in most of the smartest toilets. Sleeves are also made with puffs and ruffles at the elbow. The autumn coat sleeves will be diminished in width, but a certain breadth will be allowed at the top to accommodate the inside sleeves. Bustles are coming in again; in fact, they are now worn by the most up-to-date women. They are very moderate affairs, and they will prove a boon to many slender women. The newest bustle is constructed in sections—that is, the hip pieces are cut out and padded to fit the figure. They are intended to be worn under the corsets. It is rumored that white stockings will be worn again. Clocks are also in fashion. Designs in stockings are much more elaborate than they used to be. Ribbed effects in black, alternated with colors, combined with embroidery, are deemed very smart. Scotch plaids in hie and silk mixtures are especially attractive. Plain boot patterns in black, with colored tops, are among the novelties, as are also medallions of lace inserted in the insteps. It is stated that gloves will be worn with embroidered armlets, but they will have but a short life.

Bisquit colored linen is one of the most popular fabrics of the summer. A pretty model has a skirt wrought around the hem, with tall tapering sprays of white braiding and cording, the material being sufficiently heavy to hang well and show the embroidery.

A short tight fitting coat is drawn closely into the waist at the back, and also braided and corded in white. The coat opens slightly in front and has wide revers, one faced with tuckel white muslin and narrow valenciennes lace, the other braided and corded with white embroidery. The chemise is of tuckel white muslin, which is set off to advantage by a waistcoat of scarlet cloth, richly embroidered in an oriental design in gold, silver, blue and yellow. The Russian blouse or monjick is much worn. One built of white cashmere, to be worn with a skirt of the same material, has

ONLY GENUINE MAN.

'TIS HE WHO STRIKES OUT HIS INDIVIDUAL LINE OF ACTION.

Why Individuality Is Not the Same as Genuineness—Pertinent Examples of the Quality Which Will Be Instantly Recognized by True People.

No man is genuine, says Woodrow Wilson in the September Atlantic, who is forever trying to pattern his life after the lives of other people—unless, indeed, he be a genuine dolt. But individuality is by no means the same as genuineness; for individuality may be associated with the most extreme and even ridiculous eccentricity, while genuineness we conceive to be always wholesome, balanced, and touched with dignity. It is a quality that goes with good sense and self-respect. It is a sort of robust moral sanity, mixed of elements both moral and intellectual. It is found in natures, too strong to be mere trimmers and conformers, too well poised and thoughtful to fling out into intemperate protest and revolt. Laughter is genuine which has in it neither the shrill, hysterical note of mere excitement nor the hard, metallic twang of the cynic's sneer—which rings in the honest voice of gracious good-humor, which is innocent and unsatirical. Speech is genuine which is without silliness, affectation, or pretence. That character is genuine which seems built by nature rather than by convention, which is stuff of independence and of good courage. Nothing spurious, bastard, begotten out of true wedlock of the mind; nothing adulterated and seeming to be what it is not; nothing unreal can ever get place among the nobility of things genuine, natural, of pure stock and unmistakable lineage. It is a prerogative of every truly human being to come out from the low estate of those who are merely gregarious and of the herd, and show his innate powers cultivated and yet unspoiled—sound, unmixed, free from imitation; showing that individualization without extravagance, which is genuineness.

ENGLISH ODDITIES.

A Township Which Has Only One Resident.

Undoubtedly the most extraordinary township in England is that of Skidaw, in Cumberland. It contains but one house, the occupier of which is unable to exercise the Briton's privilege of voting, because there is no overseer to prepare a voters' list and no church or other place of worship or assembly on which to publish one, says Pearson's Weekly.

The most remote village in England is that of Farley-cum-Pitton. This truly rural spot is thirty miles and a half from the nearest railway station. As a contrast to this may be mentioned the hamlet of Ystrad, about ten miles from Cardiff. This tiny settlement possesses two important main roads, two railways and two large rivers.

A very unique feature is exclusively claimed by Trimley, a small village in Suffolk. In the one churchyard of the parish two churches are to be seen, service is conducted three times a week in each of these churches at the same hour.

The deepest well in England is found at Hamilton, in Hampshire. It stretches 350 feet below the surface of the earth. About half-way down this well shaft is a subway, three miles in length, which leads to the seacoast.

On the top of the parish church tower in Bicknoller, Somersetshire, is a yew tree, now five feet high, and still growing in a hardy fashion. It is generally believed that the tree owes its origin to a seed dropped by a bird.

Perhaps the most splendidly decorated church in the kingdom is that of Whiteley Court, Worcestershire. It is entirely constructed of white marble, the pews are elaborately carved and the pulpit is of genuine Carrara marble, richly paneled with precious stones.

On the village green at Meriden, in Warwickshire, there is a large stone cross, which is supposed to mark the central point of England.

Durability of Floor.

Some interesting tests of flooring materials recently made in Philadelphia are described in "The Scientific American." The investigators used an ordinary iron rubbing wheel, such as is used by stone workers for rubbing a smooth face on marble or sandstone. The samples to be tested were cemented to the blocks of sandstone, and laid, face downward, on the rubbing wheel, which revolved at the rate of seventy-five revolutions a minute and was kept supplied with sharp sand and water. The blocks to

BABY'S CORING.
Nature intended that every woman should look forward to the coming of her baby with joy and hope, unclouded by anxiety. Almost painless parturition is quite the usual thing among uncivilized people. Even in our own country it occasionally happens with women in robust health and good condition. It ought to be the rule instead of the exception; and it is a fact that a very large proportion of the usual pain and suffering may be avoided by looking after the mother's general health, and specially strengthening the particular organs concerned in parturition.

Many mothers have been brought through the trying time almost painlessly by the aid of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It prepares the system for delivery by imparting the organic strength and elasticity which the mother specially needs; shortens the time of labor and of confinement; promotes the secretion of abundant nourishment for the child and fortifies the entire constitution against the after period of depression and weakness. It's use should begin in the early months of gestation—the earlier the better.

Mrs. FRED HUNT, of Glenville, Schenectady Co., N. Y., says: "I read about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription being so good for a woman with child, so I got two bottles in September and December 13th, I had a twelve-pound baby girl. When I was confined I was not sick in any way. I did not suffer any pain, and when the child was born I walked into another room and went to bed. I never had another pain of any other pain. This is the eighth child, and the largest of them all. I suffered everything that flesh could suffer with the other babies. I always had a doctor and then he could not help me very much, but this time my mother and my husband were alone with me. My baby was only seven days old when I got up and dressed and left my room and stayed up all day."

Mrs. Fred Hunt

the hair, become smaller, the hair roots are not properly nourished and the hair falls out. This also happens in fevers and disease. As a usual thing, after illness, these vessels soon regain their normal condition and the lost hair is quickly restored, but with age, restoring the hair is much more difficult. And if the hair follicles are entirely destroyed there is no remedy. The best agents for restoring the hair, especially where the person has been bald some time, is by massage or electricity. The first can be given by almost any barber, and I have known ladies who massaged their own heads successfully, but the second should only be given by or upon the direction of a physician. I have restored what at first appeared to be hopeless cases of almost total baldness of long standing by daily massage and the free use of liniment and vasoline on the scalp. The tincture of cantharides, diluted to suit the condition of the individual scalp, is very useful when the loss of hair is due to inactivity of the circulation and the wasting of the glands and hair follicles.

"Now, dandruff is caused by the opposite condition of the scalp, or the over secretion by the glands. It is to the scalp what pimples are to the face. In these cases the hair follicles are clogged with too much grease, the simplest and most effective remedy being a thorough shampooing once a week and a daily massage of the scalp to aid the circulation. Washes containing alcohol, ammonia, borax and carbonate of potassium are good, but I have never had a case that would not yield to shampooing and massage.

"Some ladies have great faith in the old-fashioned idea of giving the hair one hundred strokes with the brush night and morning. I do not hesitate to tell them it is a fake. Many of them think they dislike of the brush a prejudice and pay little attention to my advice, but my dislike of the brush comes from more than twenty years' experience. The brush drags out the hair much more than the comb, and should be used as little as possible. A good healthy head of hair can be kept glossy as well without the brush as with it. All that is necessary is to keep it clean and well combed. Another fact about keeping the scalp and hair in perfect condition which many ladies disregard is that the hair should be allowed to fall loose over the shoulders whenever circumstances permit, and should never be confined at night or during the hours of repose."

A Landmark Gone.

Reuben C. Hawley, after having attained the great age of 89 years, 7 months and 18 days, crossed the Great Divide on Saturday and another link which connected us with the early history of this county is broken. Deceased breathed his last at the old homestead, Fredericksburgh, and died with the full hope of a glorious resurrection. He was one of the oldest residents of the county and a man of sterling worth. He was greatly esteemed and respected by his large circle of friends and acquaintances, who will regret to learn that the kindly old man is no more. Mr. Hawley was a staunch Reformer and at the last general election was at hand to mark his ball, for the cause of Liberalism which he had so much at heart. He leaves three daughters, Mrs. G. H. Williams, of Nanapsee, Mrs. Lasher, of Toronto, and Mrs. Bogart, of Deseronto, and one son, R. G. Hawley, on the old homestead, to mourn. The funeral took place on Sunday, a large concourse of people following his remains to their last resting place.

The Bank Robbery.

There has been no new developments in the Dominion Bank robbery but the detectives in charge are still devoting the greater part of their time to Nanapsee. Mr. Dorothy, of the Pinkerton force, has been in town this week assisting Mr. Wilks and Detective Greer, of Toronto, is also here camping on the trail of the robbers. A great many people have been interrogated by the detectives, who are quietly following up a clue that may lead to interesting developments in a few days. The theory advanced by THE EXPRESS last week that the four men who were named at Hawley's Point are the artists who did the work is generally accepted. A citizen who was up at the midnight train on the night of the robbery, to meet his wife, undoubtedly had a look at two of the men connected with the robbery. While returning home he noticed two men near the post-office muffled up in heavy overcoats. He describes them as a tall and a short man. It struck him as strange that they should be so muffled up on such a warm night.

Hulett's Fine Display.

The Lennox Agricultural Society owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. J. S. Hulett for the fine and artistic photographic display made by him at the palace. It was one of the most interesting features of the show and must have necessarily entailed a great deal of expense on Mr. Hulett. In magnitude and variety of style and finish his exhibit could not be surpassed. On Thursday we dropped in upon Mr. Hulett at his studio to learn if he had struck his feet after the volume of trade he had on show day. While there we were shown a large

His 25th Year.

On Wednesday evening last there was service in the English church as a celebration of the 25th year of the Rector's being in the Ministry. After the service a reception in the basement where a very agreeable time was spent by the many well wishes of Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis, and hearty handshaking was in order.

Wedded at Yarker.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at Yarker on Wednesday, when Miss Norah, only daughter of Mr. Jas. H. West, was united in wedlock to Dr. G. Stewart Cameron, of Petrolia, but more recently practising in Yarker. The bride is one of Yarker's fairest daughters and the groom is highly esteemed. They will settle in Omemee where the doctor has purchased a practice.

An Error of Judgment

During the progress of the fair on Tuesday a number of people were relieved of their pocketbooks and watches by adroit and practised pick pockets. After the show it came to the ears of High County Constable Sills that a couple of men had visited several stores in town and attempted to work the old flim-flam game, or change racket. The mode of procedure is to make a small purchase, tender a $10 bill in payment and then attempt to confuse the merchant while making the change. Constable Sills spotted his men and quietly shadowed them. After he had convinced himself that they were the parties in question he secured the assistance of Geo. S. Hinch and arrested them. They proved to be Horace Staley, 222 Sydenham street, Kingston, Jas. Williams, 313 Notre Dame street, Montreal, and Jas. Huffman, 1000 House, Kingston. Staley had $68.25 and two gold watches on his person when arrested, Huffman $18.40 and a watch, and Williams $50.65 and a gold watch. A set of loaded dice and other devices pertaining to the gambling profession were found on the trio.

Huffman proved to be the young man who was operating a pinch wheel of fortune on the fair grounds on Tuesday afternoon until he was stopped by the police. The other two were identified with him in operating the affair.

The three men were kept in custody until Wednesday morning when they were brought before Police Magistrate Daly, who remanded them to gaol for eight days to allow of evidence being procured against them. While in court Staley and Williams were identified by Mr. T. S. Henry, Mr. Taylor, of Taylor & Morris, and Mr. Geo. Maybes as the two men who had visited their respective places of business and attempted to work the "flim flim" game. The magistrate consented to give the prisoners their liberty providing they deposit $100 each as a guarantee for their appearance on the day of trial. This they were unable to do. On Wednesday evening the prisoners were again summoned before Mr. Daly. Mr. Herrington appeared for the crown and Mr. Deroche defended the prisoners. The charge preferred against the men was that of vagrancy but it was the intention of the prosecutor to lay other charges against them as soon as the evidence was collected.

When the prisoners were brought before the magistrate Mr. Herrington asked that they be arraigned, explaining that if they entered a plea of "not guilty" he would ask that they be remanded until Thursday or Friday. Mr. Deroche contended that no evidence had been adduced against the men and it was unfair to keep them in custody. Mr. Herrington pointed out that it was no part of his duty to disclose evidence until the prisoners had been arraigned and pleaded not guilty to the charge. The magistrate then administered a severe lecture to the three men and forthwith discharged them.

The general consensus of opinion is that the Magistrate made a grave error when he allowed the men their freedom when there was such strong presumptive evidence of their guilt. We hear murmurings in every hand and much indignation is expressed that the fakers have been allowed to go unwhipped of justice. On Thursday morning an Express representative decided to interview Mr. Daly and learn his reason for the course adopted. Mr. Daly said that he had kept the men in custody for twenty four hours, during which time he had telephoned to Yarker, Moscow and other places in the hope of locating some of the parties who it was reported had their pockets picked. Failing to secure any evidence against them he had discharged them. He had given them a strong lecture and as he had allowed them to go without imposing any fine or costs he believed it would do them some good. Had he assessed them, they would probably have said, "Well he gave us good advice, but he charged us a—well for it." What the constables had secured for their services he didn't know. That was their business. Mr. Daly said there was no doubt the men had attempted to work the flim flim game, but an attempt to steal did not constitute an indictable offence. He censured the Mayor for granting license to the electric belt man, who had fleeced the public. He said that members of the town council should exercise care in granting licenses to men for the purpose of running questionable games. If the people who had been robbed had co-operated with the authorities and reported their losses it would greatly aid the ends of justice.

We took the trouble to refer to the criminal code and find that Mr. Daly is wrong in stating that an attempt to

In our notice in last week's issue announcing the wedding of Miss M. Armitage and Mr. Jno. Toppings, both of the township of Tyendinaga, an error crept in. It was stated that the marriage took place at the residence of Mr. Henry Milling, Belleville, instead of Belleville Road. The item also credited the contracting parties with being residents of Belleville.

The case of Everett Williams, who was acquitted on a charge of manslaughter at the last assizes, may be reopened. It appears that on the motion of the Crown a case was reserved for argument as to whether certain depositions made by Williams before the coroner's jury had been properly rejected by the judge. The matter was brought up at Toronto last week but as Williams was not represented by counsel, the court made an order permitting the Crown to serve him and to institute a new trial in case it should be decided that the evidence in question had been improperly thrown out.

Death of Wm. H. Perry.

Another of the pioneers of this county passed over to his reward on Monday in the person of Mr. William H. Perry, aged 86 years, 10 months and 10 days. Deceased left his farm at Violet about a year ago and took up his residence with his son, J. Rudd Perry, John St., at whose home he breathed his last, surrounded by all the comforts that loving care could provide. Deceased sustained a bad fall about a month ago from the effects of which he never fully recovered. Mr. Perry had been a conspicuous figure in this county for years and was universally esteemed for his many sterling qualities. He was prominently identified with the Methodist church and noted for probity, industry, and integrity. Deceased was twice married, his second wife surviving him. Two of his children, Mrs. Madden, and Edwin preceded him to the grave about a year ago. The surviving members of the family are:—Mrs. W. A. Rockwell, Mrs. Fraser, M. S. Davy, J. Rudd Perry and Major A. B. Perry, of the Northwest Mounted Police. Major Perry, who has just returned from attending the Queen's Jubilee, lies critically ill at the home of his wife's relatives at Lachute, Que., and was thus unable to attend the funeral, which took place to the Napanee cemetery and was very largely attended.

Run Down by a Train.

Sunday morning at 8:30 o'clock, Emma Hartman, aged 40 years, a woman who was slightly demented, was struck by an east-bound freight train about half a mile west of Collin's Bay station, and instantly killed. The deceased resided on her brother's farm, about two miles south of Odessa. On Saturday afternoon, about 5 o'clock, she wandered away from home. Knowing that her mind was unbalanced, and fearing that she might get into mischief, Mr. Hartman and a number of neighbors started to search for her. Late at night they located her in a cedar bush. She answered their calls, but managed to keep her distance from them. Failing to get hold of the woman, the search was given up and the party returned home to wait for daylight. Sunday morning, bright and early, Mr. Alfred Hartman started out to renew the search for his sister. He heard she had been seen on the railway track, in the vicinity of Collin's Bay, and thither he started as fast as his speedy horse could carry him. He arrived at Collin's Bay, fifteen minutes too late to save his sister from an awful death.

Miss Hartman proceeded along the track east till she had nearly reached the station, when the section-man's dog ran out and she turned back. She then proceeded to walk westward along the southern track. A heavy freight train from the West came thundering down the grade, but, instead of stepping to one side and clearing the approaching danger, she calmly stood on the track and waved a small stick she had in her hand at it. At first Engineer Davis thought the woman would get off the track, so he merely sounded a warning whistle; when this failed to arouse her, he reversed his lever and sounded "down breaks." But the efforts of the engine-driver and the brakeman were of no avail: the train sped on and the cow-catcher hurled the woman high in the air, landing her in a ditch on the side of the track. The train was heavily laden and reached Collin's Bay station before it could be brought to a standstill. A second train, from the East, arrived at Collin's Bay and the engine was detached and proceeded to the scene of the accident. When the train-hands reached the place, they found Miss Hartman quite dead. Her back was broken, several ribs fractured, her right eye bruised, and her left leg badly bruised. She was dressed in a wrapper, without hat, shoes or stockings, and when she was found she was almost entirely naked. As soon as the deceased's brother arrived, he gave the train-hands charge of her body, while he went to notify his friends. Dr. Mundell was called, but, on hearing the train-hand's story, he decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

The deceased was a splendid-looking woman, about 5 feet 9 inches high, weighing about 170 lbs. Her brother says she was bright, cheerful and contented. At times she wandered away from home, but, when taken back seemed to be happy. Her father dropped dead only a week ago.

The Fainting of Mrs. Orr.

The somewhat noted old lady, Doctress Orr, died at the House of Industry, Kingston, on Wednesday, at the age of 112 years. She was born in mid ocean on the 8th of May, 1785. Mrs. Orr resided for many years in Fredericksburg, and was well-known in Napanee. She was acquainted with the medicinal virtues of many roots and herbs and made a respectable living as a professor of the healing art, until through failing health and infirmity she became reduced in circumstances and was forced to find a home in the House of Refuge where she has been for the last thirteen years. About three years ago the Doctress created considerable excitement by giving out that she was the possessor of untold wealth, both in money and land. All of this enormous wealth she would do Mr. J. J. Perry, druggist of Napanee, for whom she had a deep regard. Unfortunately for Mr. Perry the wealth existed only in the old lady's imagination. The town council of Napanee have sent word to Kingston that Mrs. Orr be given a respectable burial at their expense.

Public Temperance Meeting.

On Friday evening, Sept. 17th, a grand public temperance meeting was held in Finkle's Hall, Newburgh, in connection with the meeting of the District Division of the Sons of Temperance, of the counties of Lennox and Addington, which was held in Percy's Hall during the day. Mr. Alex. Karr, of Napanee, was called to the chair. Short addresses were delivered by D. A. Nesbitt, Principal of Newburgh High School, Revs. W. B. Seecombe, of Odessa, C. L. Thompson and J. G. Gandier, of Newburgh, also by Mr. Arnott, of Napanee, and A. D. Weeks, Grand Treasurer of the order, who was present as the representative of Grand Division of Ontario. All the addresses were interesting and to the point, many good things being said that were thoroughly appreciated. Rev. C. L. Thompson alone being somewhat, as he termed it, pessimistic in his views, but he admitted at the outset that he was sick, which partly accounted for his being somewhat faint hearted. Mr. F. Tooker, rendered, in his usual good style, a very appropriate recitation, "The Face upon the Floor." The whole programme was interspersed with vocal and instrumental music. A trio by Misses Watts and Clark and Dr. Metzler, of Odessa, entitled "Down in the Licensed Saloon," was well received as was also a solo and chorus by Miss Watts and others. A mouth-organ duet by Miss Wagar, of Napanee, and Mr. J. Whalen, of Newburgh, with Miss Edna Glenn at the piano, was much enjoyed by all. A quartette by Misses Baughan and Glenn and Messrs. Matheson and Shorey and a duet by Messrs. Shorey and Moore also formed part of the evening's entertainment. During the progress of the programme a strong resolution, bearing on the plebiscite and prohibition generally, was submitted to the meeting and almost unanimously endorsed by the largest temperance meeting ever held in Newburgh, the hall being packed to the doors, many finding only standing room. The Sons of Temperance are making a strong effort to lay the matter of temperance legislation before the people and deserve the support of all those who have the cause at heart. A full report of the proceedings of the District Division will be published in local papers next week and will be the official report to the Divisions in the Counties of Lennox and Addington.

We understand it was the intention to charge young Huffman with running a gambling outfit. The penalty for this offence is 3 years imprisonment or a fine not to exceed $2,000.

We honestly believe that the three men in question form part of an organized gang of crooks, whose headquarters is Kingston. Had the police magistrate remanded them for a few days sufficient evidence would have been forthcoming to convict them on a charge of pick pocketing. High County Constable Sills feels very much chagrined over the outcome of the case. Rightly or wrongly he feels that the police magistrate is hostile to him and will nullify anything he may do. He is thinking seriously if resigning his position as under the circumstances it is of no more value to the administration of justice than that of the ordinary constable. Mr. Sills referred to the case of the two tramps whom he arrested and brought before Mr. Daly. These tramps had a burglar's outfit in their possession. The magistrate gave them one hour in which to leave town.

Michael Dolan had Wm. Doran before police magistrate Daly on Wednesday on a charge of horse stealing. It appears that Doran lived with Dolan up to a short time ago when they had a misunderstanding and Doran left. Doran claimed that he had a lien of $46 on the horse and failing to secure his money he quietly entered the pasture field one night and took the horse. Hence the action. The magistrate ordered Doran to return the horse—Dolan to pay costs in the action.

Messrs. John Briggs and Joseph Bennett, had an anxious five minutes on Monday at the witching hour of midnight. They were guarding the exhibits in the palace when they heard an awful racket and at once jumped to the conclusion that some one burglariously inclined was endeavoring to effect an entrance. "Joe" armed himself with a double barreled gun and John grabbed a pick axe and started out to reconnoitre. They came across a male bovine which had broken loose from its moorings and was out on a foraging expedi-was held in the council chamber on Wednesday evening to consider the question of engaging a new Chief of Police. All the members were present with the exception of Coun. Lowry.

The special committee to whom was referred the various applications for the position submitted the names of Samuel Adams, of Brantford, salary $600, which includes uniform, and Robert E. Aiken, Kingston, salary $600, which includes uniform, also. The committee recommended that the selection be made by ballot. The ballot resulted as follows: Samuel Adams, 8, Robt. Aiken, 3.

The Clerk was instructed to notify Samuel Adams that he had been appointed Chief of Police of the town.

The council adjourned until Thursday evening.

The little four year old daughter of a prominent citizen gave evidence on a recent Sunday that she is a good financier. She accompanied her mother to church and had been given a copper to put in the contribution plate. During the offertory she induced her mother to trade the five cents she intended placing in the plate for her copper. When the plate passed before her the little tot quietly placed her hands behind her back and neglected to place the nickel in the plate. Next day she paid a visit to a confectionary shop and invested her savings.

The Returned Klondyker.

"Yes, George," she said, as she fondly gazed upon the bearded face of the wanderer, "we have been very poor since you went away."

"Well," change all that now, little woman," said the smiling miner. "But, here, I'm as hungry as a wolf. Where is dinner?"

"Alas, George," she answered, "I have no money to buy the necessary ingredients."

"No money?" he echoed. "Here, where are your scissors?"

With steady fingers, he rapidly snipped off his luxuriant beard.

"My darling," he said, as he handed her the whiskers, "run with these to the nearest bank. Properly washed they ought to clear up a cool five hundred in the yellow dust. And—wait, my darling!—this afternoon, I will take a bath, and if the debris doesn't yield a couple o' thousand I'm a howling kyote!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A THUMPING HEART

Is Only One Sensation in Heart Disease—Maybe it's Yours—Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart Never Fails to Give Relief Inside of 30 Minutes.

"I am glad to use Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart. The remedy is a wonder-worker. My case was chronic, having had much uneasiness about the heart, with palpitation more or less severe since I was a boy. I had abnormal action, thumping, fluttering and choking sensations. I tried many remedies, but without any benefit. After using five bottles all the distressing symptoms left me." Rev. L. W. Showers, Elderton, Pa. Sold by A. W. Grange & Bro.

RELATION OF FOOD AND CARE TO FUTURE USEFULNESS.

The Essence of Wisdom, Says Hoard's

Dairyman, That Comes From Experience and Observation.—An Article That Will Pay Dairymen to Ponder Over.

It is a sad fact that of the noted cows with phenomenal records, scarcely one has left a descendant anywhere near as good as herself. Of course, we should not expect that every calf of these cows, or in fact, that every calf of any good cow should be better than the dam, but some of them ought to be. If all cows have descended from a common ancestor, some very powerful influence has been at work to produce such marked variations.

In one breed the whole energy of the food goes to the production of beef; in another, to the production of milk rich in butter fat; in still another, to large flow of milk, with a lower percentage of fat. The factors that have made such wide and wonderful variations in breeds are not accidental, but fixed and certain, and by understanding them and continuing to use them the stock breeder has it within his power to make such further developments as many of these lines as shall throw deeply in the shade all that has been done. And invariable rule is, that when any animal man is no exception has its food and environment changed, a change at once begins in the character of the animal. Upward with better food and care, and downward under adversity. That may show these wide variations, due to food and care, can be seen by comparing a nation of nitrogen eaters, like the Scotch, with the little pot-bellied, blubber-eating Esquimaux. As marked a variation, due entirely to difference in food and care, is seen by comparing a Clydesdale horse with a Shetland pony. There is no more important field of investigation and study for the dairyman than the variations of animals due to changes of food and care. That the two great classes of cattle, the beef producers and the dairy or milk producers, have resulted from systems of feeding as greatly varied as the characteristics of the classes, need no proof, and what the dairyman should know, what class of foods and what systems of feeding and care will increase the variations in the animals.

What he wants is a cow at maturity; not one that will get fat the moment its food is increased, but one that is capable of eating a large quantity of food, and put the energy derived therefrom in the milkpail. Not the cow that will give the most milk from the best food is the best one, but the cow capable of eating the most food and making milk in proportion to the food eaten. A cow that will eat 40 cents worth of food and give 15 cents worth of milk is not nearly as desirable as one that will eat 20 cents worth of food and yield 30 cents in milk. It will take just as much time to care for her, and she will occupy as much room in the stable, and while giving the same per cent. of profit, the aggregate will be only half as much. What is wanted, then, is a large eater, with good digestion, and then to know how to feed for best results. To get this kind of a cow the dairyman must commence with the calf; not at its birth, but at the beginning of its foetal existence. By stuffing the dam all this time on all the fattening foods she can eat, thus making her fat, the calf will be dwarfed in frame and be born little and fat, and no subsequent system of feeding can ever undo the injury. The dam during this period should have plenty of coarse food, containing an abundance of bone material; should be kept strong and healthy, but never fat, and if giving milk, all the better, even if properly fed, up to the period of the birth of the youngster. If after birth it be allowed to suck its mother for any length of time, the tendency will be to fatten it, and if this be allowed until it is "fit for veal," it will be injured, more or less, and no system of feeding can ever remedy the mistake.

Doubtless, one reason why so many noted cows have such offspring is that the owners are so very anxious to "do well" for the future cow, they ruin them by injudicious feeding while in embryo, or during its first year of life. The whole system of feeding should, from the start, be with a view of making a large eater of such foods as will make large frame, and give capacity to eat and digest still more food, of the milk-producing kind; consequently the cow should never have fattening foods, but rather that which is coarse and bulky, with just enough nutriment to keep the calf making growth and muscular development. There is no better food for the calf than sweet skim milk, but this should, for the first few weeks, be fed warm, as warm as it comes from the cow, and as soon as old enough to more bone material than any other food, but the calf should not have too much of this either.

Remember, always, that it is not fat that is wanted, but an immense storage with the ability to digest and assimilate what is eaten. Early cut, bright, barn housed straw of any kind is good food, and when within reach, the calf will find a good deal of amusement "picking it between meals," and if fed plenty of bran and succulent food, it will greedily eat a large quantity, and this will help to distend the stomach and increase storage capacity. We hear a good deal about the value of a long, slim tail as indicative of the good qualities of a cow, but I don't believe it pays to let the calf run out and fight flies the first summer for the sake of tail development. Calf meat is mighty expensive fly food, and when out in the hot sun with "millions" of flies pumping away at its life blood, it can't eat food enough to grow. It is far better to keep the youngster in a cool, airy, moderately lighted room with flies "screened" out for the first summer, and supply the proper food for its growth, even if its tail don't get as long by half an inch. Remember, then, once more, that your whole aim should be to give your calf a strong frame, big belly, and an immense power to eat and digest milk producing foods, and put the production into the milkpail; and from this conception until a mature cow, the whole line of food selection and feeding should be with this end in view. J. S. Woodward, in Practical Farmer.

For Hauling Stones.

On some farms the only time for hauling stones is when the ground is dry and firm after harvest. A rigging may be made to aid in unloading by lengthening out the wagon so that a platform can be built upon two strong poles, as shown in the illustration. The poles serve as bed pieces, in which the platform should be hinged on one side and hooked on the other. When ready to unload the stones unhook and dump.

Kept It a Word.

"When I heard the bicycle bell I just stood on my rights and refused to move, threatening at the same time that if he ran into me I'd smash his machine."

"Well?"

"I kept my word. He ran into me and I smashed the machine."

"What did he do?"

"He gathered it together."

"But you?"

"Oh," sadly, "they gathered me together, too."—Philadelphia North American.
